GAAM introduces highly durable range of emergency equipment accessories

GAAM Emergency Products is launching an innovative range of Hydro-Flo Australia products, offering customers further choice when selecting fittings for their emergency equipment.

Ideal for fire brigades, emergency services, mines, oil and gas facilities, forestry sites and plantation complexes, the products are all Australian made and provide a compact, lightweight and highly durable solution in order to deliver exceptional performance.

The comprehensive range consists of adaptors and reducers, which can both be used with any combination of fire thread; nipples and flanges made to customer requirements; equipment bollards to keep lockers tidy and organised; foot valves that make priming simple and are corrosion free; hose tail and coupling sets to suit any combination of hoses; and sockets, again made to specific requirements.

Manufactured from acetal, the products boast high mechanical strength, several times stronger than pure aluminium. Consequently, they provide superior dimensional stability and considerable resilience to deformation and are tough enough to cope with the most challenging of firefighting environments.

GAAM Emergency Products' skilled team is also available to discuss individual requirements to help customers gain a better understanding of their equipment needs and assist in identifying the most appropriate solution.
